Course Description

Join Professor Foldsworth for an unforgettable afternoon in Stratford-upon-Avon, where you will explore the whimsical world of origami orchestration. In this playful yet educational class, you'll discover how folds and creases can create not just visual wonders but also harmonious sounds. Each participant will learn the art of crafting paper instruments, including origami drums, trumpets, and flutes, bringing a touch of creativity and joy to music-making. Professor Foldsworth, a master of both origami and musical arts, will guide you through the historical journey of origami and its influence on musical expression. You will develop your skills in rhythm and coordination, crafting paper pieces that can be used to create a collaborative orchestra. Participants will work together to produce a symphonic masterpiece, blending their paper creations with rhythm tools like tambourines and maracas. This class is perfect for adults looking to awaken their inner artist and musician. No prior origami or musical skills are necessary, just a willingness to fold, play, and collaborate. As you immerse yourself in the world of paper and melody, you'll forge new friendships and leave with a sense of accomplishment and joy. Refreshments, including a selection of tea and biscuits, will be provided to keep creativity flowing.
