Course Description

Join us at the enchanting Feathered Friendship Flight School, where Professor Aviary Skylark will guide you through the delightful world of avian allies. Nestled in the tranquil gardens of Oxford, this whimsical yet educational class invites adults to connect with nature and rediscover the joy found in the flutter of wings. During this three-hour session, students will embark on an avian adventure, starting with an engaging lecture on bird anatomy and the mechanics of flight. Armed with knowledge, binoculars, and a bird identification guide, participants will venture into the lush surroundings, learning to spot and identify common British birds by sight and sound. Professor Skylark, with her captivating expertise in bird-language, will teach students the art of bird calling, using specialized whistles to communicate with feathered friends. Participants will also learn how to create a bird-friendly garden, attracting a variety of species with expert tips and bird-friendly seed mixes. In the spirit of mindful observation, students will practice sitting quietly, honing their patience and deepening their appreciation for the natural world. They will record their discoveries in a charming miniature notebook, fostering a lifelong connection to the beauty and harmony of avian life. Leave the course with a heart full of joy, a mind brimming with knowledge, and perhaps a new feathered friend or two!
